The Execution of a Serial Killer: One Man's Experience Witnessing the Death Penalty Joseph D. Diaz
One winter evening, two strangers came to within three feet of one another in the execution chamber of Florida State Prison. Edward Castro, a convicted serial killer, was about to die for the vicious murders he had committed. Dr. Joseph Diaz, a young criminologist and professor, was about to take part in the execution of a man he had never met. Unwittingly, the researcher became his own subject when he found himself emotionally unprepared for the brutality of capital punishment. A psychological crash, bordering on insanity, resulted as the author confronted his own feelings about life, death, and his religious faith. This book tells the true story of the events that led to these two lives converging that night in Florida. It describes the life and the death of a serial killer, and the impact his execution had on a witness the killer never even knew.
