Flammable Hazardous Material (3rd Edition) Scott W. Kenley, James H. Meidl

This text is appropriate for freshman/sophomore level introductory hazardous materials courses taught in fire science departments as well as first responder training for hazardous materials. This text, now in its third successful edition, provides the best available introduction to basic fire behavior in flammable hazardous materials. Examining basic chemical structures and reactions in a context relevant to firefighting, this text presents a comprehensive study of the properties of flammable liquids, flammable gases, flammable solids, and plastics. With strong pedagogy and thoroughly current, up-to-date discussions throughout, this text is once again the clear choice in its field.
